When wintry winds bereft us of flowers the summer spread,
My little Sunbeam left us, I know not where she fled;
But still fond mem'ry lingers upon those happy hours,
When first with fancy fingers she culled the woodland flowers
And still her smile is one beam that speaks of Heav'n to me;
God shield my little Sunbeam, wherever she may be.
God shield my little Sunbeam, wherever she may be.
And still her smile is one beam that speaks of Heav'n to me,
God shield my little Sunbeam, wherever she may be.
